« Together, let us cultivate the power to act! »

From the 28 to 30 January 2020 the 21st edition of the European Energy Transition Conference will be held in Bordeaux. Over the 3 days nearly 3,500 participants from the economic and political worlds and the civil society will meet up at the Palais des Congrès (Convention Centre). There they will discuss and share their experience of local energy transition around a programme made up of over a hundred events– plenary sessions, sharing and co-creation workshops and site visits. 3500 participants are expected, registrations are open on the site of the event.

The ambition of the 21st edition of the European Energy Transition Conference is to bring together players from the regions, decision-makers, thinkers and entrepreneurs from the world of energy around the need to speed up energy transition. At the time of climate change strikes, the #YouthForClimate movement and just a few months away from the local elections where ecological transition is becoming of increased concern to public opinion, this 2020 edition sets out to be a veritable sounding board for the innovations put forward by the various players in society and their action potential.

Resilience of our regions, environmental impact of digital technology, use of hydrogen, local heat... so many topics that will be dealt with during these 3 days dedicated to energy transition, not only in the form of plenary sessions, but also during numerous workshops and several theme visits organized in the Bordeaux area.
